

RSCM Oxford: Singing Day for Children, August 30th 2008

When we arrived I felt a bit nervous because I didn't know anyone. We all sat down together and Louise, our teacher, introduced herself. She then got us to stand up and do some stretching moves. Then we learnt a song called 'Don't build your house on the sandy land'. This was my favourite song of the day.

During the day we split into different groups to learn different parts in other songs.

At lunchtime I chose to eat outside; then, with some new friends, I played a game of running races.

After lunch we got on with some serious singing and put everything together for the concert. At 3pm our parents came to listen to us perform and they even had to join in with one hymn!

I had a great time and will hopefully come again next year.
